ICSE Steering Committee Meeting

Welcome to Zurich

Willkommen · Bienvenue · Benvenuti · Allegra · Grüezi mitenand!

We cordially welcome you to ICSE 2012, the 34th International Conference on Software Engineering, June 2-9, 2012 in Zurich, Switzerland.

The conference theme, "Sustainable Software for a Sustainable World" carries a double meaning: on the one hand, a sustainable world is only possible with massive software support, and, on the other hand, our daily life is embedded in and dependent on so many software systems that this software can only be created and maintained properly if we do this in a sustainable fashion.

The conference offers a strong technical program with broad appeal to researchers, industrial practitioners, students, and educators in the field of software engineering. The ICSE 2012 main conference consists of three keynotes, several tracks and some special invited presentations.

As a highlight for all participants, we are pleased to have three excellent keynote speakers: SASKIA SASSEN from Columbia University (USA), FRANK-DIETER CLESLE from SAP (Germany), and JEFF KRAMER from Imperial College London (UK).

The technical research papers track provides participants an opportunity to hear and discuss innovative results and evaluations in software engineering research. This track always attracts many top-quality submissions and this year continues that trend.

With the Software Engineering in Practice (SEIP) track, ICSE 2012 also features a full practitioner track to address key issues faced by software engineering professionals in industry.

The Software Engineering Education (SEE) track covers a broad range of software engineering education topics, such as curricula, software projects in SEE, and issues in teaching software engineering.

The NIER track provides a forum for novel ideas and emerging results. Short, crisp presentations and intensive discussions foster the exchange of ideas.

Formal and informal demonstrations reflect the state of software engineering tools. Posters showcase work in progress.

In the SE Horizons track, distinguished invited experts provide a look over the fence and talk about software engineering issues in neighboring fields and specific problem areas.

The ACM Student Research Competition (SRC) track offers undergraduate and graduate students a unique forum to experience the research world, and compete for prizes.

Two days of tutorials and technical briefings, five days of workshops, a doctoral symposium, a new faculty symposium, and several co-located events are held before and after the main conference.

ICSE 2012 has been advertised as the premier software engineering conference. This is not just a slogan; it is our mission and commitment: all members of the ICSE 2012 organizing committee, the program committee and all track and workshop program sub-committees have worked hard and done their best to make ICSE 2012 a truly premier event.

We thank all members of the conference committees for their dedication and effort. We also are greatly indebted to our supporters and corporate donors for their generous support. And we hope that you, the participants of ICSE 2012, will enjoy and find useful what we have prepared for you. Welcome to ICSE 2012!

What does it take for a hearing aid to hit the airwaves twice as fast?

Another idea. And Zühlke.

Bring cutting-edge technology to market faster. Zühlke assessed the research and development division of a leading hearing aid manufacturer to enable the company to bring its products to market faster. Together with the client, Zühlke has defined a platform strategy; adapted processes, and restructured development. The result: a product time-to-market reduction of 50% – from 24 to 12 months – with resource requirements remaining unchanged.

Digital Formations of the Powerful and the Powerless

Abstract

This talk compares two kinds of socio-technical formations: electronic financial networks and local social activist movements that are globally networked. Both cut across the duality global/national and each has altered the economic and political landscapes for respectively financial elites and social activists.

Using these two cases helps illuminate the very diverse ways in which the growth of electronic networks partially transforms existing politico-economic orderings. They are extreme cases, one marked by hypermobility and the other by physical immobility. But they show us that each is only partly so: financial electronic networks are subject to particular types of embeddedness and local activist organizations can benefit from novel electronic potentials for global operation. I show how financial electronic networks and electronic activism reveal two parallel developments associated with particular technical properties of the new ICTs, but also reveal a third, radically divergent outcome, one I interpret as signaling the weight of the specific social logics of users in each case.

About the Speaker

Saskia Sassen is the Robert S. Lynd Professor of Sociology and Co-Chair, The Committee on Global Thought, Columbia University, USA.

Her recent books are Territory, Authority, Rights: From Medieval to Global Assemblages (Princeton University Press 2008), A Sociology of Globalization (W.W.Norton 2007), and the 4th fully updated edition of Cities in a World Economy (Sage 2011). The Global City came out in a new fully updated edition in 2001. She is currently working on When Territory Exits Existing Frameworks (Under contract with Harvard University Press). Her books are translated into twenty-one languages. For UNESCO she organized a five-year project on sustainable human settlement with a network of researchers and activists in over 30 countries. She contributes regularly to www.OpenDemocracy.net and www.HuffingtonPost.com.

She has received several honors and awards, most recently a doctor honoris causa from each Delft University (Netherlands), DePaul University (USA), and Université de Poitiers (France). She serves on several editorial boards and is an advisor to several international bodies. She is a Member of the Council on Foreign Relations, a member of the National Academy of Sciences Panel on Cities, and chaired the Information Technology and International Cooperation Committee of the Social Science Research Council (USA).

Supporting Sustainability with Software – An Industrial Perspective

Abstract

Supporting sustainability with software is often summed up in the expression 'Green IT' and directly relates to the reduction of CO2 emissions and energy used by IT. The amount of CO2 used in the IT industry covers 2% of the overall CO2 emissions. "Green by IT" describes the influence of appropriate software to the remaining 98% of the industry. We estimate that the effect of our sustainability related software on our customers' CO2 footprint could be 10.000 times higher than our own.

The so called triple bottom line defines sustainability as covering economic, ecological, and social aspects and the dependencies between. Based on this definition of sustainability, software could not only focus on green house gas reduction. Other topics like: consumers' protection, sustainable supply, reduction of emission (air, water, waste), recycling, human recourse management and intelligent energy usage must be as well focus areas supported by software. At last software industry should not only focus on delivering tools for life cycle assessment (LCA), we should use it and provide a LCA for our software self.

The industrial question is how to increase short and long term profitability by holistically managing economic, social and environmental risks and opportunities supported by software.

About the Speaker

Frank-Dieter Clesle is Vice President On-Demand Content as a Service Infrastructure, a part of SAP's sustainability solutions located at SAP Sustainability Lab in Markdorf, Germany. Before joining SAP, he was Executive Vice President Corporate Portfolio Management at TechniData, the leading provider of Environment Health and Safety solutions, until TechniData was acquired by SAP in 2010.

He is a co-author of the book Umweltkonforme Produktgestaltung (environmentally compliant product design) published 2008 by Publicis (in German) and contributed to the book EcoDesign: Von der Theorie in die Praxis (EcoDesign: from theory to practice) published 2008 by Springer (in German).

Frank-Dieter Clesle is a member of various sustainability-related working groups in European industrial associations.

Whither Software Architecture?

Abstract

Since its early beginnings in the 1980s, much has been achieved in the research field of software architecture. Among other aspects, this research has produced foundational work on the specification, analysis and component configuration of software architectures, including the development of associated software tools. However, adoption of the research by industry has been largely methodological rather than based on precise specifications in architecture description languages (ADLs) or rigorously underpinned by formal models of behaviour and non-functional attributes.

Why is this? Why were the actual formalisms and tools not more widely adopted? Can we draw any lessons from this? In this talk, I hope to explore this further, drawing on my personal experience as a researcher in distributed software architectures.

I particularly hope to tickle the fancy of the younger members of our community, indicating the excitement of research, the benefits of belonging to a vibrant research community such as ours, and the benefits of being an active contributor. For the more mature researchers, there will be some nostalgic memories combined with some inevitable stepping on toes.

For both young and old, there will be some thoughts for research opportunities as the need for self-managing adaptive software systems becomes more urgent.

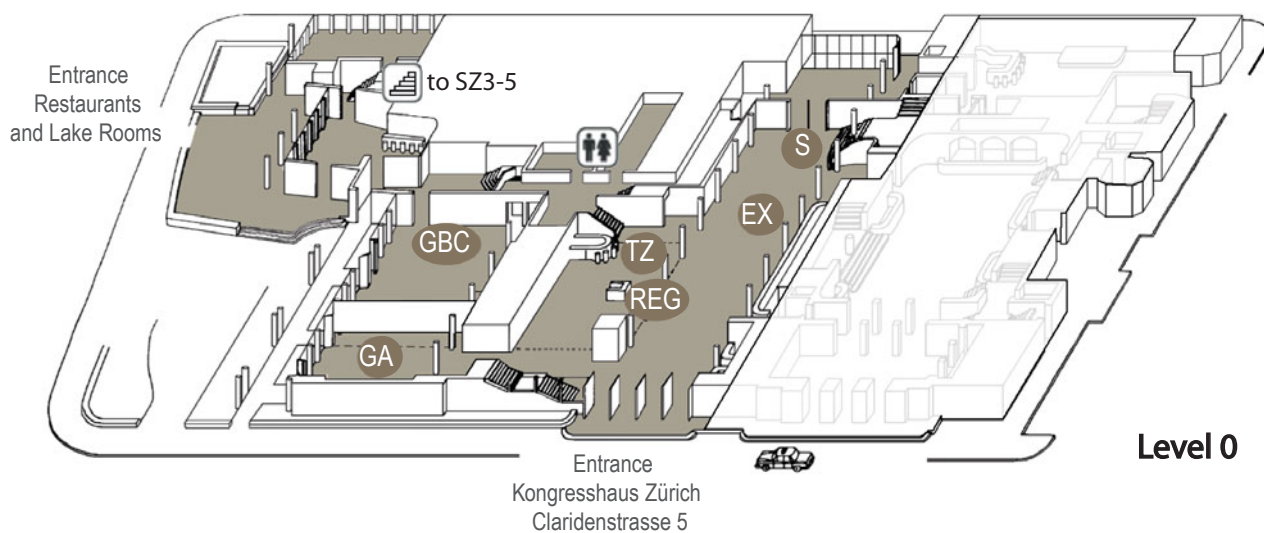

About the Speaker

Jeff Kramer is the Senior Dean at Imperial College London. He was Head of the Department of Computing from 1999 to 2004 and Dean of the Faculty of Engineering from 2006 to 2009.

His research work is primarily concerned with software engineering, focusing on software architecture, behaviour analysis, the use of models in requirements elaboration and architectural approaches to adaptive software systems. He was a principal investigator of research projects that developed the CONIC and DARWIN architectural environments for distributed programming and of associated research into software architectures and their analysis.

Jeff was Program Co-chair of ICSE '99, Chair of the ICSE Steering Committee from 2000 to 2002, and General Co-chair of ICSE 2010 in Cape Town. He was Editor in Chief of IEEE TSE from 2006 to 2009, received the Most Influential Paper Award at ICSE 2003, and was awarded the 2005 ACM SIGSOFT Outstanding Research Award and the 2011 ACM SIGSOFT Distinguished Service Award. He is co-author of books on Concurrency and on Distributed Systems and Computer Networks, and the author of over 200 journal and conference publications. Jeff is a Fellow of the Royal Academy of Engineering, a Chartered Engineer, Fellow of the IET, Fellow of the ACM, Fellow of the BCS and Fellow of the City and Guilds of London Institute.
